

Kitten Prep List

Food:

Kittens can eat dry food when they are about 8 – 10 weeks old. This process will differ per kitten and will not be instant. We recommend still feeding your kitten wet food during this time, but you can always leave out a bowl of dry food for them and monitor to see if they are eating the dry food. If they are eating dry food, you can gradually reduce the amount of wet food you give them. It is still recommended to give them wet food from time to time, more often the younger they are, as it will help them grow and give them a lot of the fats and proteins they need.

- Dry Food: High-quality kitten kibble specifically formulated for kittens. We feed our kittens and younger cats Acana First Feast, unfortunately not from Amazon and get it in person from Ren's pets, Global pets, etc.

Another very good brand of dry food is Royal Canin, which also has a kitten version of their dry food as well as many different types (digestion, hairballs, etc). Be careful of just getting random cat food brands, you want to aim for one that has a good percentage of protein compared to fats.

- Wet Food: Nutrient-rich canned food for kittens to ensure proper hydration and variety. Both kitten and adult canned food we can find on Amazon, Fancy Feast for kittens found here and Friskies for adults found here. They also have shredded variants and other flavors too!

Royal Canin is also a good brand for wet food, however we did not find it on Amazon. It looks like this:

- Water: Fresh water should always be available. Use a shallow bowl to prevent spills. Cats will like flowing water more and helps keep it more sanitary. We suggest a stainless steel water fountain like this one, as plastic bowls can release chemicals we don't want.

Sanitation:

- Litter Box: A small, easy-to-access litter box for your kitten. Ideally you would want to clean this once per day for your kitten, for clumping litter removing all the clumps in the box. If your cat does his business outside of the litterbox, if you can move it to the litterbox and move the kitten there as well so he can smell that it's an area for going to the bathroom. A little bit after you kitten has eaten you can also place him in there to show him where it is.
- Litter: Clumping, unscented litter is often preferred for kittens. Cats are very sensitive to scent, if it becomes too much you can use a deodorizer like this one from time to time.

Toys:

- Interactive Toys: Toys like feather wands, laser pointers, and interactive balls. Feather wands with multiple ends like this one are lots of fun! A laser pointer like this one from Amazon is great and easy to use and recharge. For balls and catnip toys we have found there are many good options at Dollarama surprisingly. Our cats love the ones you fill with catnip from there.

- Scratching Posts / Cat Towers: To prevent furniture damage and satisfy their natural scratching instinct. Cats also love climbing and being on top of things able to see everything from above. Cat trees are wonderful for this, and we highly recommend to find one off of amazon like this one. Most ones in stores like PetSmart will be easily double the price for some reason.

Bedding:

- Cat Bed & Blankets: A cozy, warm place for your kitten to sleep. To be honest, cat can love anything. They might even prefer a cardboard box over a very fancy memory foam bed, so don't go too crazy with these. We like to keep cardboard boxes from deliveries for a few days and then discard them for new ones.

Health and Safety:

- Vet Contact: Have the contact information of a local veterinarian. Getting their first vaccines is very important.
- Carrier: A safe and secure carrier for trips to the vet. Make sure to check how sturdy the bottom of the carrier is. This is mostly applicable to backpack carriers, some of them have a thin bottom which while may be okay when your kitten is still a kitten, when they get older and heavier it can cause the backpack to droop and not give a stable and even surface for your cat to sit on. For example, this one is too thin, but this one is okay.

Grooming:

- Brush: A gentle brush suitable for kittens to help with shedding and bonding. Kittens will not shed as much hair while they are growing, but it can be a good way to bond with them and get them used to it!

It is very handy to get one that lets you pop out the hair from the brush like this one.

- Nail Clippers: Kitten-sized nail clippers for regular trimming just like these. Try to trim along the nail with as flat an angle as possible like shown here. Be careful that sometimes they bolt holding the blades together can come loose making it hard to cut, and should be replaced.

Angle the clippers down in the direction away from the quick and trim off the tip of the nail.
